

Sturbridge stagecoach is offering free rides

August 20, 2010 11:32 AM

Globe Staff

If your idea of a good time is a free ride in a stagecoach or on a riverboat, Old Sturbridge Village may be the place for you.

Old Sturbridge Village, a history theme park that celebrates New England life in the 1830s, said it is offering free rides on its stagecoach and riverboat now through Sept. 30. The free rides are "an end-of-the-summer thank-you to visitors," the village said.

And to put the tin hat on things, a special PBS day is planned for Sept. 5. On that day, Curious George and Ruff Ruffman will be on hand. As PBS fans know, these two characters are featured in PBS TV shows. "A range of family-friendly games and crafts" is also scheduled, the village said.

Unless special deals apply, admission is $20 for adults, $18 for seniors, and $7 for children age 3 to 17, the village said.

The photo of the stagecoach in this post was included in the village's press release.